THE address presented by the Chinese residents at Penning to Sir AMDREW CLARKE. late Governor of the Straits Settlements, is against the injustice and rapacity of the native chiefs of Perak, and Laroot. The Chinese population of the Straits is large and important, and on them, to a considerable extent, depends the prosperity of the pussed Settlements. The indolent Malay will never work save when obliged; the industrious Chinaman is always willing to toil so long as he is fairly paid, and the result is that in Singapore the Chinese population far out. It is to be hoped that Sir Andrew CLARKE'S successor will be equally popular with and beloved by the Chinese population, and that he will not lose sight of the interests of this numerous and important section of the community over whom he now

It is all nonsense to reply that these plays, being in a foreign language, appeal only to a small and select class, unless to "small and select class" be added this qualification, "which loves anything indecent if only wrapped up in French, just to give it additional piquancy." We English, represented by our flicials, whether civil or ecclesiastical, seldom lose an opportunity of thanking Heaven that we are not as other men are across the Channel; and yet the pieces which were the most recent succeases of the French company in this country have been exactly those where the action—as in the supper scene in "Le Réveillion" and the scene in the house of Fanny Bombanca in "Tricoche et Cacolet "-has been of the broadest character, and the dialogue most unequivocal. GIRLS OF THE PERIOD. The following strongly-contrasted sketches York Times of the "fireless locomotives" emplayed on a city and suburban railway in New Lady are taken from a review in the American Poung (Irleans. The road is about six miles in length. Quarterly Journal of the Medical Sciences for From the centre to the outskirts of the city it is January. The roviewer begins by stating that From the centre to the outskirts of the city it is operated upon by mule power; there the mule is taken from the car, and the little fireless lecomotive is attached, which operation is accomplished in less time than would be occupied in attaching another mule. The train is then of like a recket, the driver still on the platform of the car working the engine. The car is stopped and started quicker than when drawn by the mule. The railway (double track) is in the middle of a very wide street, and is a little raised, so that it cannot be crossed by carriages except at the street crossings; thus, being somewhat isolated, high speed is admissible. The locomotive is simply a cylinder of boiler iron, perhaps 3 ft. in diameter and 10 ft. long, mounted on four wheels, and partly filled with water. PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOB comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on table as good as now. the best principle hitherto attained. Though "The Canterbury Tales" first appeared some years after the death of Edward III. they may be taken as illustrating the social life of the latter half of the fourteenth century; and there is hardly one of its phases, hardly an age or condition, which he has not fixed for ever in that comedy of manners. In his power of creating a character at once the type of a class and living, breathing individual; in the variety of his gifts, in the pathos, the humour, the brightness, the fancifulness, the profusion of his genius, he is no unworthy precursor of the golden age of English poetry-being indeed, in the words of Tennyson,

The first warbler, whose sweet breath : Preluded those melodious bursts, which fill The spacious times of great Elizabeth . With sounds that ceho still.

As the plays of Shakespeare are to "The Canterbury Tales," so is the prose of Milton and Bolingbroke to the rugged and halfformed, but vigorous, massive, and pathetic language of Wielif .- Longmans' "Epochs of History."
